

Best Practices and Compliance Fire Safety

Tuesday, January 30, 2024

During this session subject matter expert Jason Reid, Senior Advisor, National Life Safety Group discussed how landlords, tenants and employers operating within a building all have a vital role to play relative to the Fire Safety Plan.

All supervisory staff must first be adequately trained to clearly understand their responsibilities before taking on this important duty. The importance of fire drills, fire code, risk management 101 and daily checks were also discussed.

Top Takeaways:

- Fire Safety Plans are no longer just a code compliance document, but more of a road map and tool for building owners to achieve and maintain compliance.
- Fire Safety Plans must be approved by the AHJ and must be fully reviewed and updated at minimum every 12 months.
- There is an increasing risk of reported fire incidents from lithium-ion batteries. Follow best practices for battery charging and managing equipment in buildings.
- There are 12 key questions to audit your Fire Safety Program Compliance, view here.
